The figure consists of seven sub-diagrams labeled A through G, arranged horizontally. Each diagram illustrates a step in a clustering process:

- A: Shows a single cluster of data points with one centroid (marked with a cross) and a single vertical line representing the initial cluster.
- B: Shows the same data points with the centroid and a vertical line, but with a small horizontal line segment added to the vertical line, indicating a split or refinement.
- C: Shows the data points with the centroid and a vertical line, and a small horizontal line segment added to the vertical line, indicating a split or refinement.
- D: Shows the data points with the centroid and a vertical line, and a small horizontal line segment added to the vertical line, indicating a split or refinement.
- E: Shows the data points with the centroid and a vertical line, and a small horizontal line segment added to the vertical line, indicating a split or refinement.
- F: Shows the data points with the centroid and a vertical line, and a small horizontal line segment added to the vertical line, indicating a split or refinement.
- G: Shows the data points with the centroid and a vertical line, and a small horizontal line segment added to the vertical line, indicating a split or refinement.
